Jewish Center Bomb Threat Suspect Is Arrested in Israel

Bomb Threats

An Israeli-American teen was arrested in March 2017 and charged with making more than 150 bomb threats to Jewish Community Centers, schools, ADL offices, and other Jewish community institutions. A second man, Juan Thompson, 31, of St. Louis, Missouri, was arrested and charged with making copy-cat threats against Jewish centers and ADL offices. Thompson is alleged to have made at least eight of the threats against JCCs in January and February as part of a sustained campaign to harass and intimidate a former girlfriend. He was charged with one count of cyberstalking, and other charges may be pending.

In total, ADL identified 163 bomb threats against JCCs and other Jewish institutions during the first quarter of 2017. The Justice Department affidavits, which accompanied the announcement of the criminal charges against the Israeli teen, graphically documented the chilling texts of some of the bomb threats. A number of the calls to Jewish community institutions graphically threatened a "bloodbath" where "Jews" were going to have their heads blown off. Other threats to Jewish institutions included specific language that a large

A lot of Jewish people (including me!) have an ambivalent-to-nonexistent relationship to the religious parts of our identity. Please note that nazis, anti-semites, and white supremacists don't care about the nuances of our self-definition, and will kill us anyway.

In the era of the #MeToo and Times Up movement, New Brunswick's Mesh Diversity is helping businesses create an inclusive and diverse culture in their workforce.

According to the 2016 census, only 3.4 per cent of the population of New Brunswick are visible minorities.

The concept for the company was inspired by the co-founders professional experiences

“18 years of racism in a country that would welcome you but not necessarily include you” says said Dr. Leeno Karumanchery, Chief Diversity Officer of Mesh Diversity.

Karumanchery says sexism, homophobia and racism are alive and real and he wants to help companies understand how to deal with it productively.

Their software platform provides actionable, real-time metrics that drive healthier more productive business principles, while putting safety, belonging and inclusion at the forefront.

“Organizations who are interested in diversity, interested in inclusion can actually do that while getting the main business done too,” said Karumanchery

Intelisys Aviation Systems hired Mesh Diversity a year ago to help with their IT offices in India and Vietnam, but they also use the service here too.

“I think our industry has a diversity problem, our geography has a diversity problem we live in an area of the world that is very white, Christian, male, so that is reflected in our company being based here,” says Wayne Chamberlain, president of IntelliSys Aviation Systems.

Chamberlain says his last dozen new hires have shown the impact mesh diversity has. The training and management solutions Mesh Diversity implements can be tracked online by clients.

“The candidates that are joining our team now are just an amazing fit for us culturally and it has kind of hit the ground running and feels like they have been here since forever so that alone has been worth the investment for us,” said Chamberlain

For Mesh Diversity, business is booming and they are expanding to the USA and Europe.

To support their new growth they are now hiring content marketers and software developers.

Immigrant work visa programs are a self-replicating scam. Importing foreign workers suppresses wages, thus attracting fewer native students. Fewer Americans pursuing visa-saturated occupations is then used as pretext for more visas. They know this; they just assume you don't.

Racist Shows Up to Harass Black Woman at Press Conference Announcing He Won't Be Charged For Harassing Black Woman

At a press conference, Monday, Vermont's chief law enforcement officer almost completed one of the greatest performances of whitesplaining in recent history as he announced that he wouldn't file charges against a white nationalist who allegedly stalked, harassed and terrified one of the state's only black lawmakers.

As Vermont Attorney General T.J. Donovan described the voluminous evidence, he pointed out that he didn't have enough evidence. He explained how the hate speech was a matter of free speech. He explained that the harassment against the black family was bad, but that it wasn't a crime. All the while, the woman was the target of the incessant acts of hate stood beside him as he shucked and jived.

Then the racists showed up.

According to WNYT, On Monday, Vermont Attorney General T.J. Donovan held a press conference at the Congregation Beth El synagogue in Bennington, Vt. to announce that, instead of filing charges, he would instead release a 10-page report on the racial harassment of former State Rep. Kiah Morris, the state's only black woman state representative who resigned in September after allegedly being harangued by white supremacist Max Misch, who describes himself the man who "be representin dem white muhfuckaz of Bennington."

Seven Days Vermont reports.

The press conference went off the rails when Bennington resident Max Misch entered the room as Morris answered a television reporter's question about the AG's probe. Misch had been subject to a yearlong protective order in 2016 prohibiting him from contacting Morris over a series of racist tweets, messages and online comments he aimed at her.

Misch wore a black long-sleeve shirt bearing the image of alt-right icon Pepe the Frog. Many in the room began shouting "No, no, no!" and "Out!" when he arrived.

"This is not safe," one person shouted. "Why is this asshole allowed to come in here?" someone else in the crowd said.

"Because it's America," another attendee replied. "We have to listen to everyone, whether we like it or not. But we don't have to put up with it."

Also in attendance was Kevin Hoyt, a failed Republican candidate who has accused Morris and her husband of inciting others to paint him as a Nazi. Hoyt says he is a victim of reverse racism after his request for a stalking order of protection against Morris' husband was rejected by a judge. The hunting expert and gun advocate has repeatedly insinuated that Morris and her husband were fabricating their claims to make Vermont look like a state that tolerates racism.

"I call bullshit on Ms. Morris!" yelled Hoyt. "As a political opponent who was accused of being a Nazi, I think we're hearing one side of the story ... I was called a Nazi, I was called a white supremacist. Obviously, racism exists in Vermont ... I question to what degree, though."

After winning a House seat in the state legislature, Morris gave up her re-election bid before resigning in September, citing her husband's open-heart surgery combined with Hoyt and Misch's continued online campaign of harassment. Citing tweets that told her to "Go back to Africa, it's the only place you'll ever be safe," The Attorney general's report listed forty-eight separate racial incidents where Morris had been threatened and attacked, including:

- A message to Morris' husband informing him that he should put his wife "in her place," or the messenger would do it for him;
- A tweet that read: "You will never silence me. Every time you attend a political rally at the Four Corners or another local venue and I'm aware of the event, I will troll the hell out of you and the other subversives there. Maybe I'll bring a friend or three with me too;"
- Someone paintballing Morris' car and spray painting a swastika on a tree near Morris' home;
- Another tweet said, "Stop pushing 'social justice' on your nearly entirely White constituency in Bennington, VT. Go back to Chicago if you want to engage in SJW [Social Justice Warrior] bullshit. We will continue to fight against your efforts to make our town/state look more like your mongrel son;"
- Multiple reports to police of strange men and suspicious vehicles in the cemetery behind Morris' home;
- A break-in at the Morris home where Morris' husband's neckties were stolen and found in the cemetery (Police did not fingerprint or swab the crime scene);
- Morris' child care provider reporting a man sitting in a car outside the home filming the Morris residence;

Donovan concluded that there was not enough evidence to charge Misch with any crimes, noting that there was a lack of evidence. "No Vermont court has specifically considered whether communications like those sent to Ms. Morris could be construed as 'true threats,'" Donovan's findings read, adding:

In this case, the online communications that were sent to Ms. Morris by Max Misch and others were clearly racist and extremely offensive. However, the First Amendment does not make speech sanctionable merely because its content is objectionable. The question here is whether the messages, in context, were communicating a serious expression of an intent to harm Ms. Morris or her family. The fact that a number of messages were directed at her role as an elected official raises the issue of whether they were intended to express political opposition through the use of hyperbole and insult, as noted in the case law above. Therefore, there appears to be insufficient evidence to pursue criminal charges under Vermont law.

"Kiah Morris was a victim of racial harassment. Relatively few Vermonters have had any of these experiences, and very few have had these experiences in the context of vicious racial harassment," Donovan said, according to the Washington Post. But, he added, "the Constitution does not permit us to prosecute racist speech because we find it offensive."

Meanwhile, Morris stood in the face of her harassers and the attorney general, noting that law enforcement officers had shrugged off her claims.

"For two years, we lived in my husband's childhood home, feeling unsafe, never sleeping peacefully because we had to be vigilant," said Morris, "We did everything we were told to do. We reported as we should, held nothing back and trusted in a system that was insufficient and inept at addressing and repairing the harm done."

So there you have it. It was just political expression and free speech, which is aptly expressed in the Vermont state motto:

FEBRUARY 12, 2019 02:06 PM, UPDATED FEBRUARY 12, 2019 02:07 PM

Less than a month later, police arrested the man accused of harassing Morris, a self-described white nationalist, on a charge that he possessed large capacity gun magazines, which are now illegal in Vermont. Max Misch, 36, pleaded not guilty on Thursday.

"The Attorney General's conclusions and public statements in this case have focused on the conduct of private citizens, while remaining silent on the actions and inactions of Bennington officials," the NAACP and ACLU said in a joint statement, adding that the ACLU has a pending racial profiling lawsuit against the Bennington Police Department.

Media ignored this video of nonwhites bashing a Trump piñata at Beto's border rally for Mexico. When they say "end racism" they mean end whiteness. Trump is merely a stand-in for white Americans.

The inevitable result when a political party, from its white supremacist leader on down, embraces a cult of race-hatred and violence. The entire GOP is responsible for this:

I missed that the full Buchanan essay exalted by Trump regurgitates Neo-Nazi talking points of "white genocide." Add this to the 749860239 rebuttals for when pundits insist the GOP-Nazi comparison is strident hyperbole.

When you ask a question at a lecture, is it secretly just your opinion ending with the phrase “do you agree?” If so, your name is something like Jake, or Chad, or Alex, and you were taught that your voice is the most important in every room. Somewhere along your academic journey, you decided your search for intellectual validation was more important than the actual exchange of information. Now how do you expect to actually learn anything?

More contemporary Children books are telling stories of family diversity, multiculturalism and Indigeneity.

By Sarah Mokrzycki

11 FEB 2019 - 1:52 PM UPDATED YESTERDAY 1:56 PM

Bigger Digger by Brett Avison and Craig Smith (2011)

Brett Avison's Bigger Digger is the first of four books featuring a young boy called Bryn and his dog Oscar. In this story, Bryn and Oscar make an exciting discovery when digging in the backyard, and need bigger and bigger diggers to uncover what they have found. Each of Avison's Bryn and Oscar books is set on "Mum and Ted's farm". The use of Mum and Ted as titles for the adult characters is a simple but effective way of introducing the concept of stepfamilies.

Family Forest by Kim Kane and Lucia Masciullo (2010)

This book showcases one particular family - with half, whole and step siblings as well as different parental relationships (a father and stepmother, and a mother and her partner). A common issue with diverse family representation is that it often comes in the form of "issue books" - books that are issue driven rather than story driven. It is often difficult to explain a topic or issue without sacrificing story, but Family Forest manages to explain blended families.

My Two Blankets by Irena Kobald and Freya Blackwood (2014)

This book tells the story of a young girl who leaves her war torn country and settles in Australia. Raised by her auntie, the book showcases family diversity in both formation and culture. The story examines the character's feelings of loneliness and isolation in a country where everything is "strange", including the language, which she doesn't understand. To cope, she metaphorically wraps herself in a blanket of things that are familiar. After befriending a white Australian girl, she starts to make herself a new blanket with her new friends and experiences.

Love Makes a Family by Sophie Beer (2018)

This vibrantly colourful book showcases families in many forms, including same-sex and single parents, with character skin tones varying on every page. Although families are at the centre of this book, diverse family representation is explored through the illustrations, not the text. Instead, the story focuses on the one thing that truly makes a family – love.

Rural low income whites are far more likely than urban blacks to be unnecessarily & unjustifiably prescribed opiates. According to the media & academia, this means that blacks are the true victims here. # How Racial Bias Has Shaped the Opioid Epidemic

A California-based study indicates ingrained bias within the health care system has helped determine the crisis' victims and caused others needing help to remain neglected.

By Gaby Galvin, Staff Writer Feb. 11, 2019

Implicit biases in doctor's offices and elsewhere in health care are likely drivers behind stark racial and class divides in drug addiction and overdose deaths in California, a new study suggests.

While affecting people across race and ethnicity, the opioid crisis gripping the nation has been concentrated largely among low-income whites, and has been labeled a problem primarily of public health, not of criminal justice. The epidemic is thought to have been touched off by a combination of social factors – including trauma, poverty and a lack of economic opportunity – and the widespread availability of prescription opioids beginning in the 1990s.

The new study, published Monday in JAMA Internal Medicine, indicates the health care field has had a hand in driving the epidemic that goes beyond merely dispensing prescription drugs, suggesting that differing access to and within the system has resulted in rampant addiction among low-income whites as well as a sea of untreated pain in minority communities.

“The prescription drug crisis should really be thought of as a double-sided epidemic,” says Joseph Friedman, the study’s lead author and a medical student at the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA. “Essentially, the systematic racism within the health care system has led to increased addiction and overdoses in low-income white areas, but also, (to) insufficient treatment among communities of color.”

“These disparities may have ironically shielded communities of color from the brunt of the opioid epidemic, but they also represent disparities in the form of lack of adequate access for the treatment of pain and psychiatric conditions,” Friedman says.

'Medicine's Racism Problems Go Even Deeper'? So true PBS. Racism is rampant in medicine, like allowing low IQ, low test score, unqualified non-whites into med school over high IQ, high test score, qualified whites

UN: Belgium must apologize for colonialism, face its racism

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS — Racial discrimination against Africans “is endemic” in Belgium’s institutions and the nation needs to apologize for the crimes committed during its colonization of Congo and make reparations, U.N. experts said Monday.

Belgium's actions in Congo have long been criticized as one of the worst examples of colonial abuse. Writer Adam Hochschild alleged in his 1998 book "King Leopold's Ghost" that Leopold reigned over the mass deaths of millions of Congolese.

"The root causes of present-day human rights violations lie in the lack of recognition of the true scope of the violence and injustice of colonization," the U.N. Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent said in an interim report on Belgium.

King Leopold's reign over Congo from 1885 to 1908 was notorious for its brutality. After Leopold handed over Congo to the Belgian state, the tiny nation continued to hold sway over an area 80 times its size half a world away until Congo became independent in 1960.

The UN group says racism in Belgium continues today.

"(We are) concerned about the human rights situation of people of African descent in Belgium who experience racism and racial discrimination," it said. "There is clear evidence that racial discrimination is endemic in institutions in Belgium."

I'm a Jew, I'm Jewish, I'm part of the Jewish people, and as it happens also part of the Jewish community. If you talk about "the Jews" my spidey sense goes up. If it's like, "Jews typically don't eat bread at Passover," you know, that's fine. Careful of generalizations, tho.

To anyone proclaiming Christian faith and using the name of Jesus to perpetuate violence and discrimination against trans people, check out Matthew 19:11-12 and Acts 8:26-39, wherein Jesus & the Holy Spirit justify the worthiness of eunuchs, a biblical parallel to trans identity.

Netflix paid NOTHING in federal or state taxes in 2018 despite posting record profits of $845million - and even got a $22million rebate

- The Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy said corporations like Netflix are still 'exploiting loopholes' under the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act
- Senior fellow Matthew Gardner said 'Netflix is precisely the sort of company that should be paying its fair share of income taxes' and called the figures 'troubling'
- Donald Trump promised 'the biggest tax cut, the biggest reform of all time'
- Netflix, which has just announced a price hike, now has 139 million subscribers
- The streaming site says despite report they paid $131 million in taxes in 2018

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (WTHR) — New legislation in Georgia would outlaw any symbols, monuments, memorials or other dedications to the Confederacy on public property.

Under HB 175, the only exception to the ban would be at museums, Civil War battlefields, 11Alive reported.

Even flying a Confederate battle flag on private property might be outlawed.

The bill would also make it illegal to display symbols of the Confederacy at a residence, store, place of business, public building or school. That law includes inside or outside those buildings.

A Georgia resident told 11Alive that she doesn't agree with the proposal because it would take away from the education of the country's history.

Paul Feig's Powderkeg Launches Diversity Initiative Break The Room

by Mike Fleming Jr

- February 7, 2019 8:30am

EXCLUSIVE: Paul Feig's digital production company Powderkeg has launched Break the Room. It is a writers room development initiative formulated with writer-producer Sameer Gardezi. BTR, done with support from PopCulture Collab and MuslimArc, will approach the creation of diverse content by bringing writers of color together with community thought leaders for a week long writers room filled with diverse scribes to put marginalized voices in control of representing each projects' community and ideas.

Feig has been quietly road testing this initiative, and the first show to come out of it is the digital short-form series East of La Brea, produced in association with Lyft Entertainment and Pillars Fund.

The project follows two twentysomething working class Muslim women, Aisha Hassan and Farha Munshi, as they struggle to navigate the changing landscape of their native Los Angeles home. East of La Brea premieres at SXSW, competing in the Episodic Pilot Competition.

BTR has completed two rooms in Los Angeles and Albuquerque respectively with another one to commence later this month in Portland. The first project under the banner is and untitled D'Lo project, which is based on the life of Sri Lankan trans comic D'Lo, who was supported by what they call an "all queer" writers room to tell the story of coming back to his small desert hometown of Lancaster, CA. From the Albuquerque room has come The Great Manygoats, a comedy about a Navajo family that struggles to cut through the red tape of government grant funding by changing their trading post business into a vegan sex shop. This project was written by an all Native American room.

The next room will write a comedy centered on the refugee experience of Portland comedian and Libyan native Mohanad Elshieky. The aim is to highlight the experience of living in a “welcoming” ultra- liberal bubble, yet still feeling like a fish out of water.

BTR is also looking to scale internationally with partnerships lining up in Canada, India and the Middle East, with plans to develop stories that have a unique connection to each region. The first BTR partners are international production company Hyde Park Entertainment and ShivHans Pictures, who have joined to fund development of a South Asian-American comedy through a BTR writers room.

“Real change requires breaking norms and paradigms,” Gardezi said. “What makes Break the Room impactful is that it’s not a diversity initiative, a shadowing program or a workshop. We are empowering writers by actually letting them do the work and be part of the process in a meaningful way. It’s less about backing a cause than it is investing in underrepresented voices.”

“We started Powderkeg to tell the stories of talented, emerging and underrepresented voices in comedy. Break the Room invites these writers across the country and globe to develop, control and craft them, with our support, in a way that will resonate with viewers,” adds Paul Feig and Laura Fischer.

Feig and Fischer launched Powderkeg as a digital studio to champion diverse comedic voices and incubate multi-platform projects. It is soon to launch a feature film contest with Issa Rae’s Color Creative looking for the next great teen movie, and its inaugural female directors program Powderkeg: Fuse will premiere later this spring. The company is also in development on a variety of formats, including a half hour scripted comedy at YouTube Premium, a series at Snapchat, two movies for Freeform and a multi-script deal at the interactive platform EKO. The Powderkeg venture is being funded by Superbrands Capital, the private entertainment industry investment company run by Adam Bold.

As long as Feig continues working toward another mad comedy vehicle for Melissa McCarthy, these offshoot projects are very laudable.

ISRAEL

Founded in 1881 to provide comfort and aid to Jews escaping pogroms in Eastern Europe, HIAS has always had a special relationship with Israel.

HIAS IN ISRAEL

Even before the establishment of the State of Israel, HIAS helped Jews to immigrate to Palestine as early as 1927. HIAS established an office in Israel in 1950 to assist the large waves of olim in their arrival, absorption, and integration into Israeli society. As the Israeli government and the Jewish Agency have assumed responsibility for immigration and absorption of olim, HIAS now plays a unique role in the development of the Israeli asylum system.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR OLIM IN ISRAEL

For more than three decades, the HIAS Scholarship Program has awarded funds for higher education tuition to student olim based on academic achievement, financial need, and community service.

LEGAL EDUCATION - REFUGEES IN ISRAEL

In 2001, HIAS established the first-ever refugee law course in Israel and in 2003, we co-formed the first Israeli refugee law clinic. Established at Tel Aviv University's Buchman Law Faculty, the clinic is the premier institution of refugee law, knowledge, and expertise in Israel.

www.hias.org

LEGAL EXPERTISE - REFUGEES IN ISRAEL

As the State of Israel sought a response to the influx of more than 50,000 migrants seeking refuge from conflict zones, HIAS was at the forefront of training asylum officers in RSD (Refugee Status Determination) and lawyers in refugee law so that they can help asylum seekers find protection and realize their right to due process. Today, HIAS is leading a pro bono legal representation program for asylum seekers in Israel.

ASSISTANCE TO INDIVIDUAL REFUGEES IN ISRAEL

HIAS meets with individuals and families (mostly from Eritrea and Sudan) to help them evaluate options for reuniting with family in other countries, including the United States, Canada, Italy, Australia, Switzerland, and Sweden.

COLLEAGUES AND PARTNERS

HIAS works with Israeli and international NGOs including African Refugee Development Center, Aid Organization for Refugees and Asylum Seekers, Center for International Migration and Integration, Hotline for Refugees and Migrants, Ruppin Academic Center, Physicians for Human Rights, Tel Aviv University Refugee Rights Clinic, Amnesty - Israel, and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)

I think I know the solution to America's issues. Stop putting Ivy League graduates on the bench, in Congress, in White House. They are not representative of our population. Nor are they solely the "best and brightest" among us. Ivy Leagues Killed America.

Congress sings 'Happy Birthday' to Judah Samet, Holocaust survivor, during SOTU

The Pittsburgh synagogue shooting survivor was a guest of President Trump's at the State of the Union address on the night of his 81st birthday.

He survived the Holocaust, escaped the Tree of Life shooting and, now, had members of Congress singing "Happy Birthday" to him.

Judah Samet, who turned 81 on Tuesday, attended the State of the Union address as one of President Donald Trump's guests and received special recognition from the president.

"Tonight, we are also joined by Pittsburgh survivor Judah Samet. He arrived at the synagogue as the massacre began. But not only did Judah narrowly escape death last fall – more than seven decades ago, he narrowly survived the Nazi concentration camps," Trump said.

After Trump recognized Samet, the chamber broke out into song to wish him a "Happy Birthday," one of the more touching moments from Tuesday night.

In October, USA TODAY sat down with Samet in his Pittsburgh apartment two days after an anti-Semitic gunman killed 11 of his friends at the Tree of Life synagogue.

Samet was four minutes late to services that Sabbath. A conversation with his housekeeper delayed him. When he arrived in the synagogue's parking lot, a man knocked on his car window.

“He told me, ‘There’s a shooting inside your synagogue,’” Samet told USA TODAY at the time. “All of a sudden, I see this guy who was a detective hiding behind a wall but popping his head out. He had a pistol and he was shooting.”

Bullets zipped by Samet's car, but the former soldier in the Israeli Army said he wasn't riled.

“I was very lucky. Four minutes saved my life,” he said.

It wasn't the first time Samet dodged death in the face of violent anti-Semitism. When he was a young boy, Samet survived 10 months in the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp during World War II and was just a stopped train ride away from Auschwitz.

"Judah says he can still remember the exact moment, nearly 75 years ago, after 10 months in a concentration camp, when he and his family were put on a train, and told they were going to another camp," Trump said Tuesday night.

"Suddenly the train screeched to a halt. A soldier appeared. Judah's family braced for the worst. Then, his father cried out with joy: 'It's the Americans.'"

Samet was one of two Holocaust survivors and one of two Pittsburgh shooting survivors honored Tuesday. SWAT Officer Timothy Matson, who was injured in the massacre, and Joshua Kaufman, who was a prisoner at the Dachau Concentration Camp, both received recognition from Trump.

After the shooting, Samet was again reminded of that hate from the Holocaust. "It never ends. That was my thought," he said.

Samet had been attending Tree of Life for more than 50 years. He knew all 11 people killed. But he was steadfast in how he would handle their killing.

"How did I handle the Holocaust? You got to go on," Samet said.

Senate Passes Bill That Rebukes Trump and Opposes Israel Boycott

By Catie Edmondson

Feb. 5, 2019

WASHINGTON — The Senate overwhelmingly approved a Middle East policy bill on Tuesday that included both a rebuke to President Trump over his withdrawal of troops from Syria and Afghanistan and a contested measure to allow state and municipal governments to punish companies that boycott, divest from or place sanctions on Israel.

The measure, which passed 77 to 23, started as the kind of routine policy bill that passes the Senate with little to no opposition. It reauthorizes at least $3.3 billion in military financing to Israel and extends security aid to Jordan, imposes new sanctions on individuals who provide support to the Syrian government and directs the Treasury Department to determine whether the Central Bank of Syria is engaged in money laundering.

“This represents the broad consensus of this body about our nation’s responsibilities as an ally and a partner,” Senator Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, the majority leader, said on Tuesday.

“Yes, there are options to combat that decline, but contrary to what many people believe, we do very poorly in opening up our borders to skilled immigrants. Our H1-B visa restrictions are a disgrace. Most high-income people in our country do not realize that their incomes are being subsidized by their protection from competition from highly skilled people who are prevented from immigrating to the United States. But we need such skills in order to staff our productive economy, so that the

This is a truly bizarre and new form of trickle-down economics. Greenspan thinks that we should import more high skilled workers, reduce the wages of our current high skill workers, and that this will somehow "grow" the standard of living for Americans.

It's almost Orwellian: poverty equals prosperity! Foreign workers equals Americans. Market competition is subsidy. Subsidizing imported workers through subsidized education equals market competition.

CHEER Colorado, an adult cheer group that stunts and performs to raise money for local LGBTQ charities, got the spirit flowing at the Cherry Creek Diversity Conference.

Dakota Ridge High School student Jasmine Davis performs spoken word at the 26th annual Cherry Creek Diversity Conference held Feb. 2.

The Westminster High School mariachi band was one of many diverse performances during the opening ceremonies at this year's Cherry Creek Diversity Conference.

Paula Stone Williams, a transgender pastor and speaker on gender equality and LGBTQ advocacy, addressed students at the Cherry Creek Diversity Conference as the keynote speaker Feb. 2.

“This conference has helped me realize that in this world, there are voices that will try to tell us that certain people, certain identities don’t belong. That they aren’t valued,” Selkin said at the 26th annual Cherry Creek Diversity Conference held Feb. 2. “But we are responsible for combating these false narratives.”

Selkin co-chaired this year’s event with Highlands Ranch student Zoe Siegal, 16.

Siegal said before joining the conference she had a difficult time expressing herself and showcasing her uniqueness.

“I used to live life feeling like I could only be myself in certain places,” she said. “I felt like I could only be Jewish at temple or only Chinese at home.”

More than 1,000 teenagers from 105 Colorado high schools and youth organizations throughout the state attended this year’s event, which was hosted by the Cherry Creek School District; organized by Youth Celebrate Diversity, a Denver-based nonprofit organization; and underwritten with a donation by RBC Wealth Management.

Diversity Day

By:

Lauren Johnson

Updated: Feb 04, 2019 07:16 PM CST

George Nettels Elementary students received a valuable lesson today.

Students from PSU dropped by to educate the children on diversity. And they did this as a part of their service for Black History Month.

Members from the Pittsburg State Black Student Association and Hispanics of Today stopped by classrooms to get kids more aware of diversity. The lesson worked to share the meaning behind Black History Month.

"We wanted them to know that we all have differences, we're all not just one thing. We're all not just tall. We're all not just short. But we do have differences, these differences make the world bigger and better each and everyday," says La'Shay Thomas, Pres. of the Black Student Assoc. at PSU.

The hands-on exercises included a story detailing the importance of varied backgrounds as well as a project that made kids aware that differences are okay.

"We give the children one crayon and tell them to color the world with this one crayon. Color your favorite place, your favorite thing, your favorite meal. And then we give them many crayons just to show them the differences between the colors and we compare that to the world. And usually the students like the picture with the color or more differences. And we're saying that's how the world is and should be," says La'Shay Thomas.

And the PSU students feel like the event taught them a little something, too. Program facilitator Marisela Resendiz says seeing the children eager to learn about diversity makes her hopeful for the next generation.

"Something that they would take away is simply embracing who they are. And knowing that their differences are what makes them unique," says Marisela Resendiz, Hispanics of Today at PSU.

This is just one of the events the school is sponsoring to observe Black History Month. Both programs also work on the PSU campus to spread messages of inclusion and diversity.

Amazon has defended its facial-recognition tool, Rekognition, against claims of racial and gender bias following a study published by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The researchers compared tools from five companies, including Microsoft and IBM.

While none was 100 percent accurate, it found that Amazon's Rekognition tool performed the worst when it came to recognising women with darker skin.

Amazon said the study was "misleading".

The study found that Amazon had an error rate of 31 percent when identifying the gender of images of women with dark skin.

This compared with a 22.5 percent rate from Kairos, which offers a rival commercial product, and a 17 percent rate from IBM.

By contrast Amazon, Microsoft and Kairos all successfully identified images of light-skinned men 100 percent of the time.

The tools work by offering a probability score that they are correct in their assumption.

Facial-recognition tools are trained on huge datasets of hundreds of thousands of images.

But there is concern that many of these datasets are not sufficiently diverse to enable the algorithms to learn to correctly identify non-white faces.

Clients of Rekognition include a company that provides tools for US law enforcement, a genealogy service and a Japanese newspaper, according to the Amazon Web Services website.

How armed leftwing and rightwing groups united against racism

A far-right group's racist flyers led to dialogue among pro-gun groups in the Pacific north-west. But their alliance may be fragile

Jason Wilson in Portland, Oregon

Sun 3 Feb 2019 06.00 EST

PSJBGC and other anti-racist groups collected the flyers and dumped them on the doorsteps of Patriot Front members and a local tattoo shop with far-right sympathies. As they did so, TPW posted a surprising and supportive message to its Facebook page.

It read: “ATTENTION PATRIOT FRONT!!! III% is coming for you. Apparently you missed the part about WE WILL DEFEND OUR COMMUNITIES.”

The message also said: “Racists like you deserve no platform. You disgrace the word patriot.”

The TPW leader, Matt Marshall, said the post attracted angry comments and threats from white nationalists.

“It was removed after it was reported due to some of the comments,” he said. He also claimed that the FBI called him regarding the threats and said his group was planning an updated and expanded statement which would include other white nationalist groups.

Duke Aaron, spokesman for the self-proclaimed “big tent” leftist PSJBGC, said he had known the TPW statement was coming.

Before the statement went up, he said, he got a text from a TPW member. When he saw what it said, including the part about no-platforming fascists, he said he “was pretty happy with that. It’s a big shift.”

OKAVANGO DELTA, Botswana — This country in the middle of the Kalahari Desert of southern Africa is a lure for safari tourists eager to spot the wild animals that roam freely. Yet visitors can't help but notice something else about this country that is as rare elsewhere in the world as the endangered animals who live in this vast savanna: racial harmony.

School district plans to hire more people of color after racial discrimination complaint

BY LEXI CORTES

FEBRUARY 01, 2019 01:49 PM, UPDATED FEBRUARY 01, 2019 03:49 PM

After High Mount School's only black educator in May heard the superintendent say he didn't want "black kids" in the front office when a reporter and photographer would be visiting, she filed a complaint.

Superintendent Mark Halwachs was investigated by the High Mount 116 school board president. As a result, he was required to undergo diversity training and told to start actively recruiting more people of color to the nearly all-white staff, which led to a three-year plan of action, covering 2020. He faced suspension if he didn't.

During the investigation, Halwachs explained that what he meant to say instead of "black kids" was students in detention, who typically lined up in that area, according to a district report.

Documents related to the investigation and the plan were recently released to the Belleville News-Democrat through a public records request.

Debra Wolf, the board president who investigated the complaint, described Halwachs' comment as regrettable, but "inadvertent and unintentional" in her report to the board.

"Mr. Halwachs said that his intent was to avoid having students who were serving detention being photographed, as it would send the wrong message about High Mount students," Wolf's report stated. "He said, 'We have great kids.'"

Neither Halwachs nor the school board members responded to a request for further comment about the results of the investigation.

On average in the last five years, black students comprised about one-third of High Mount School's enrollment. Wolf acknowledged in her report that the school staff doesn't reflect that diversity.

In the five months since the investigation, school board meeting minutes show the district has hired eight new employees — mostly teachers' aides. Halwachs said three of the new classroom aides are black.

School social worker Yvette Hicks was the employee who filed the complaint against Halwachs in May, stating that he didn't want black children photographed for a BND article that featured High Mount's school resource officer.

School resource officer Cheryl Venorsky talks with several of the older High Mount School students.

Derik Holtmann dholtmann@bnd.com

Hicks died unexpectedly last year from a stroke before the investigation was discussed publicly at a special school board meeting in August.

Wolf, the board president, read a prepared statement at that meeting, which was provided to the BND.

"During my last conversation with Ms. Hicks, she told me that she saw this discrimination issue as a school- and community-wide issue, not just with Mr. Halwachs and that her wishes were to have the entire staff at HMS take diversity and sensitivity training to understand how to deal with our student demographics," Wolf wrote in the statement. "... She further stated that she wanted to see more minority staff hired at HMS."

Jason Caraway, the attorney who represented Hicks, couldn't be reached for comment.

After going through training titled "culturally relevant teaching" in October, Halwachs wrote in a message to the board that he planned to apologize to the staff for the comment. He characterized it as culturally insensitive.

Along with that message, Halwachs submitted the three-year plan for the district, according to documents provided to the BND. He said that it had been looked over by an “equity committee” made up of administrators, teachers and aides.

Among the stated goals are to improve the existing staff’s “cultural awareness” and to hire more people of color to classroom, administrative and staff positions.

The single-school district has about 450 students and 28 teachers on average. Those teachers are almost all white women now. There are two administrators: a superintendent and a principal, who are both white men.

“High Mount values diversity and inclusion,” Halwachs wrote in the message to the board. “I and my staff believe that the myriad of ways in which we differ offers a richness that enhances our school. With actions and words, we are taking proactive, daily behaviors to make each person feel welcome and empowered.”

High Mount isn’t the only school district lacking people of color.

About a quarter of the districts in the metro-east had only white teachers last year, according to the latest state data, which is down from 2017, when there had been even more districts with all-white teaching staffs.

Matteo Salvini mocks move to tackle racism in Italian football

Interior minister says officials have 'Richter scale for booing' after threat to halt matches

Angela Giuffrida in Rome

Thu 31 Jan 2019 12.22 GMT

Under the new guidelines, matches will be paused after the first warning and players will converge in the middle of the pitch. Upon a second warning, players will return to the changing rooms and a security official will then decide whether to call off the game.

The FIGC's president, Gabriele Gravina, said the move "simplified procedures by removing responsibility from the referee". Procedures previously required the referee to briefly stop a match if racist chants were heard and to request a public announcement asking fans to stop.

But Salvini disparaged the move, saying: "Now we have a Richter scale for booing. Come on, don't make us laugh."

Retiring justice says Canada's courts need more diversity: 'not everything is working perfectly'

By Aly Thomson The Canadian Press

In the UK, universities will now be ranked lower if they don't have enough 'diversity.' In other words, if a university doesn't accept unqualified non-whites over qualified whites, it will be penalized and lose its prestigious ranking.

There has to be an uncomfortable element in the discourse for things to change. Whether it's the LGBT movement, or women's rights, or race, it doesn't matter. People have to be made to feel uncomfortable. And especially white people, because we're the most comfortable.

White people still have no clue what being born white means. ... Yes, because we were born white, you have advantages that are systemically ingrained, culturally, psychologically there. And they've been built up and reinforced for hundreds of years. But many people can't look at it. It's difficult. It can't be something that is on their plate on a daily basis. People want to hold their position. People want the status quo.

Tarrant Republicans aim to add minorities, end bizarre kind of segregation

BY MICHAEL RYAN

Diverse faces of the Tarrant County Republican Party include, from left: Chaplain Rich Stoglin, Andy Nguyen, Shahid Shafi and Trasa Robertson Cobern. SPECIAL

So the Tarrant County Republican Party already had an uphill battle when it comes to appealing to people of color — even before a faction of the group forced a failed but embarrassing Jan. 10 vote on whether to oust Vice Chairman Shahid Shafi for being Muslim.

Yet, Shafi is still on board, as is Andy Nguyen, a former Tarrant county commissioner whose family escaped Vietnam when he was 15. And there's a quiet but furious effort underway at the Tarrant County GOP to diversify the ranks and promote the diversity already there.

Chaplain Rich Stoglin, president of the majority African-American Frederick Douglass Republicans of Tarrant County — founded by area African-American icon Reby Cary — argues that the face of the Tarrant County Republican Party is already more diverse than it gets credit for, though regrettably the party doesn't officially track minority engagement. Stoglin is aiding outreach efforts and pushing for more precise tracking of minorities.

You can tell by talking with her that Trasa Robertson Cobern, who leads the party's 25-member Outreach Committee, is on it. She says the committee's makeup is remarkably comparable to the county's demographics: The committee, she says, is about 15 percent African-American, 25 percent Hispanic, 5 percent Asian, 45 percent white and 10 percent first-generation immigrant.

People of color feel 'unsafe' when they see words, I feel unsafe when I see crime statistics

Orange County Schools admits to 'racial intolerance,' passes equity policy.

By Joel Brown

Monday, January 28, 2019 11:00PM

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (WTVD) -- In a surprising, last-minute turn, Orange County school members voted unanimously Monday night in favor of the school system's first-ever racial equity policy, which in its first line acknowledges "persistent racial intolerance, inequities and academic disparities in Orange County schools.

Former board chairman Dr. Stephen Halkiotis arrived at the meeting opposed to the measure. He expressed concern about "the district" admitting to a history of racial disparities. He felt the blame should be acknowledged by society in general.

"I don't agree with the word district, because I think it puts us on shaky legal ground," Halkiotis said.

In a surprising, unanimous vote, the Orange County School Board has approved a district racial equity policy which acknowledges "persistent racial intolerance, inequities and academic disparities" with its school system.
#abc11 pic.twitter.com/OzXoAfjwA4

But then came the wave of public support for the policy which is aimed at closing the achievement gap between white and non-white students by reducing suspensions, making schools more responsive to alternative learning styles and hiring more teachers who look like their diverse student bodies.

Orange County parents and teachers push school board members to pass newly-written racial equity policy to address the school system's racial disparities in educational outcomes. #abc11

"It is not OK that our current teacher population looks so much like me -- white and female," said Katie Harper, an OCS parent. "Over forty percent of our 7,300 students are students of color, so out of nearly 700 teachers, where are our 280 teachers of color?"

Twelfth-grade student Namron Chapman said, "Data shows Orange County Schools is failing us. You can see it in our classrooms, especially the higher placement classes - it's very few faces that look like mine."

Great! I can't wait for them to talk about how blacks/Hispanics are admitted to top colleges despite having far lower test scores/GPAs than their white counterparts, or maybe they'll go full red pill & talk about racial inequalities in welfare usage, crime stats, & IQ studies pbs.twimg.com/media/DyPuYTeUYAEwGKt...

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (WVIR) - People often have a tough time discussing race and equality but on Monday, minority activist students at the University of Virginia opened up to get a dialogue going on grounds.

In celebration of Martin Luther King Junior Day, the Frank Batten School of Leadership and Public Policy hosted 'MLK Day Batten Hour: Racial Equality'.

The event held a discussion on racial equality at UVA and was led by representatives from UVA's Black Student Alliance (BSA) and Latinx Student Alliance (LSA).

New Data on Black Mismatch and Failure at UVa

May 22, 2016

The University of Virginia's "Finals Weekend" — what other schools call graduation — is upon us. Not far behind, no doubt, will be the annual accolades such as the Journal of Blacks in Higher Education's report that "The University of Virginia consistently posts the highest Black student graduation rate of any state-operated university in the country." And this has been true "over the past 20 years."

There is a dark side to this accomplishment. Last June, for example, the African American graduation rate was 80.3% — as usual, the highest in the country among public institutions — but no one seemed to notice that the corresponding 19.7% rate at which blacks failed to graduate in four years was twice as high as the rate for Asians (9.5%) and whites (10.9%). Thus, according to UVa's Institutional Assessment data, of the 218 blacks who entered in 2011, 43 of them did not graduate in 2015. The six-year graduation rates for the 250 blacks entering in 2009 were better (88.8%), but the rate at which they failed to graduate (11.2%) remained more than twice as high as the rate for whites (5.4%).

These most recent numbers are not unique. In fact, they are a bit better than numbers from the previous decade. UVa's admissions data show that 3,048 blacks enrolled at UVa from the fall of 2000 through 2010, and its graduation rate data reveal that 789 of them, 25.8%, did not receive a degree after four years. 411 of the 2,844 who entered through the fall of 2009, 14.5%, did not receive degrees after six years.

The fact that blacks fail to graduate at twice the rate of whites and Asians at UVa even though it boasts the highest black graduation rate of any public university strongly suggests the presence and effect of "mismatch" that Richard Sander and others have documented — that any group admitted to selective institutions with much lower academic qualifications than their peers will cluster at the bottom of their classes and sustain higher failure rates.

The fact that UVa each year admits a much higher proportion of black applicants than Asians and whites indicates that it is indeed lowering the admissions bar for blacks. In the twelve classes entering from the fall of 2000 through 2011 (to mirror the four-year graduation rates discussed above), an average 33.9% of white applicants were offered admission, but for blacks the offer rate was 54.3%. In the most recent data available, which I discussed here, UVa offered early admission to 29.7% of the white applicants to the class of 2020 and 42.5% of the blacks.

It is theoretically conceivable — but highly unlikely — that there is a non-discriminatory explanation for the racial preference revealed by these admission proportions. But UVa, like most (perhaps all?) similar institutions, makes it impossible to analyze the nature and degree of racial preference it offers by refusing to publish SAT scores and other academic qualification data by race, even though it clearly has the data. Similarly, it publishes student GPA by gender but not by race. And, as I observed on Minding The Campus a few months ago, "it will be a freezing day in July in Charlottesville before UVa voluntarily releases test scores, etc., by race."

my Delegate in the Virginia General Assembly, who is interested in this issue and who forwarded my piece with questions to the University's government relations office. Since Del. Landes is Chairman of the House of Delegates Education Committee and Vice Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, his queries tend to be answered promptly.

Laura Fornash, Executive Assistant to the President for State Governmental relations (and former Virginia Secretary of Education), sent the math plus verbal results, by race, for the students admitted to the class entering next fall, along with the observation that not all students take the SAT and that UVa's racial range is not surprising given the results nationally. And indeed the results are not surprising:

African Americans	1154
White	1353
Asian	1397

There is not, of course, a perfect correlation between SAT scores and graduation rates, but those scores are a significant component and indicator of academic qualifications, and there is compelling evidence that raising academic requirements raises the probability of graduation.

Is CPD using racial profiling to catch Divvy thieves?

Advocates say yes—and that they have the stats to prove it.

On the evening of August 18 last year, Eboni Senai Hawkins, cofounder of Chicago's chapter of the black bicycle group Red Bike and Green, witnessed Joshua Thomas, a 22-year-old African-American, being stopped by police while riding a Divvy bike-share cycle on the sidewalk near Chicago Avenue and Rush Street. The officers handcuffed and frisked Thomas, called in the serial number on the baby-blue bike, and discovered it was stolen. They arrested Thomas, who was later sentenced to two days in jail.

During the height of that summer's Divvy theft crisis, Senai Hawkins argued that police were targeting young black men for sidewalk-riding tickets as a strategy to recover hot bikes. She noted that people of all races pedal on sidewalks downtown, where hectic multilane streets put cyclists at risk, but she asserted that white sidewalk riders are rarely ticketed, let alone handcuffed and searched. "In no way is it OK for the Chicago police to enforce [a crackdown due to] the fact that Divvy has a technology issue."

Soon afterward I spoke with black Old Town resident Hakeem Appling, 24, who was also riding a Divvy on the sidewalk near Chicago and Rush on July 18 when he was detained, cuffed, frisked, ticketed, and arrested for possession of a stolen bike. Appling argued that his skin color was a factor in the stop. "That's harassment."

Catrina Hampton, 23, a vehicle transporter for Hertz, was yet another African-American who was ticketed for sidewalk biking on a Divvy near Chicago and Rush on August 9. She said she was handcuffed and searched, but the police didn't call in the number on her Divvy.

All told, 23 of the 30 adults ticketed for sidewalk riding in the two downtown police districts during July and August of last year were African-American, including 20 black men, according to records the city provided earlier this month. That's about 77 percent of the ticket recipients in a city that's roughly a third African-American.

Meanwhile only five non-Hispanic whites were ticketed. That's approximately 17 percent of recipients, although whites also make up about a third of the city. (Of the other two people ticketed, one was Asian, while the other had no race listed on his ticket.)

Romanian immigrant Samuel Baltes, 21, was one of only two white men ticketed. On July 20, Baltes was biking down the sidewalk of Chicago near Rush on his old beater while making food deliveries for Postmates. Suddenly a squad car whipped around the corner to block his path. He said the officers wrote him a $50 ticket but he wasn't cuffed or frisked.

Upward of 500 Divvies went missing last summer due to the shortsighted decision to remove a key piece of security hardware from their docks, according to city e-mails the Reader obtained in September. Soon afterward Divvy sped up the pace of reinstallation, wrapping up by the end of November, and, thankfully, the bike-share problem seems to be behind us.

Arrests for possession of stolen Divvies peaked in July and August, when more than 120 adults were charged citywide, according to the anonymous crime blog CWB Chicago. Of the 30 people ticketed for sidewalk riding downtown in those months, eight were arrested for possession of stolen bikes—all of them African-Americans on Divvies.

The CPD says it has used sidewalk biking enforcement to recover stolen cycles.

But after learning that 23 out of those 30 people were African-American, Senai Hawkins and other black bike advocates say the data confirms their suspicions: police have been unfairly singling out African-Americans who cycle downtown for tickets. "How else would you interpret it?" she asked.

David Griggs, who leads the monthly South Side Critical Mass bike rides, noted that the Chicago Tribune found that officers have written exponentially higher numbers of sidewalk-riding citations in some communities of color. Last summer a CPD representative admitted that this was due to bike enforcement being used as a pretext for searches in high-crime areas.

After seeing the downtown ticketing numbers, Griggs said, "It's disheartening to know police are targeting black riders wherever they may ride, not just on the south and west sides."

However, after I reported on the Appling and Thomas cases on Streetsblog last summer, CWB Chicago ran a post arguing that racial bias wasn't a factor in those stops. It pointed out that the area around the Chicago Avenue Red Line station is designated as a crime hot spot by the CPD, so it has a 24/7 police presence.

A CPD representative confirmed this area is heavily policed due to numerous assault cases last year. Most recently, on December 9, a group of teens attacked three bystanders on the el platform, fracturing one man's eye socket. Eight of the 30 ticketing incidents, including half of the arrests, occurred within this zone. CWB also noted that Appling and Thomas had each been arrested several times in the area for Weeks after claiming to denounce racism and bigotry, Rep. Steve King (R-Iowa) is still using his official government website to direct his constituents to a white nationalist blog that regularly publishes the work of vile racists, anti-Semites, and Nazi sympathizers, HuffPost has found.

The top of King's house.gov website currently features a YouTube video of King, in a Jan. 15 speech on the floor of the House of Representatives, claiming to reject the "evil ideology" of white supremacy. "That ideology never shows up in my head," he tells his congressional colleagues, who were voting on a resolution condemning racist comments King made this month to The New York Times.

Yet just beneath King's YouTube video is a link to "Illegal Immigrant Stories," a section of King's website he's devoted to cherry-picked news articles falsely portraying Latinos as prone to committing crimes. Many of the news clips King cites are from disreputable far-right propaganda outlets like Breitbart, The Daily Caller, WorldNetDaily, and The Gateway Pundit. One of the news clips King uses is from the patently white nationalist website VDare.com.

VDare is a hate site named after Virginia Dare, said to be the first white baby born in the "New World." It has routinely featured the writing of eugenicists, anti-Semites and Nazi sympathizers, including prominent white supremacists Richard Spencer, Kevin MacDonald, Sam Francis and Jared Taylor.

Sophie Turner Condemns Racist Sansa Stark Meme Because the Lady of Winterfell Does Not Mince Words

By MEGAN MCCLUSKEY  January 28, 2019

Sophie Turner has spoken out against a racist meme featuring her Game of Thrones character Sansa Stark. The 22-year-old actor took to Twitter on Saturday to denounce a now unavailable tweet advocating for “Purity In Race and Culture” with a photo of Sansa.

“White people are the product of 50,000 years of evolution. Do not destroy our genetic legacy by race mixing,” the meme read. “Do it right! Date and marry white!”

Turner did not mince words in her response to the image. “Ew,” she wrote. “Please don’t use me to promote racism.”

It would appear, she pays attention to memes of the show.

A local author has released a children's book, Little Tommy's Big Beliefs, celebrating cultural diversity and promoting acceptance.

Airdrie-based Katie Mackrory originally wrote the book for a class project while she was studying social work at the University of Calgary in 2014.

“It was based on the idea that you can do little things, and it still makes a big difference,” said Mackrory.

In the story, Tommy sees people wearing hijabs, kippahs, and crosses, and his mom teaches him the value of learning about others' beliefs.

“He learns that he can still show people love, kindness, and respect even if they have different beliefs from his own,” she said.

“The message is that even if you don't know someone, you can still smile and make friends that way. That little act makes a huge difference in the world.”

Want proof that we live in a clown world and occupied nation? Taking steps to ensure that only citizens are voting is controversial, 'inherently flawed,' and met with lawsuits from civil rights groups.

Civil rights groups warn that Texas voter citizenship check could violate federal law

Thirteen groups issued the warning, and some are considering suing the state.

BY ALEXA URA JAN. 28, 2019 3 HOURS AGO

The state of Texas' announcement that it was flagging tens of thousands of registered voters for citizenship checks was met with dismay among civil rights attorneys and voting rights advocates, who said it echoed efforts around the country to remove eligible voters from the rolls.

Now, several prominent civil rights groups are warning that following the state's recommended procedure for verifying those voters' citizenship could violate federal law.

Lawyers with 13 organizations — including the Texas Civil Rights Project, the ACLU of Texas, the League of Women Voters of Texas and the NAACP Legal Defense Fund — are demanding that the state rescind an advisory sent to local election officials regarding the individuals whose citizenship status the state says the counties should consider checking. In a letter sent Monday, the groups requested a response by Jan. 30, claiming that the state's data was flawed and demanding more information about the methodology it used.

Some of the groups are considering litigation against the state, said Beth Stevens, voting rights legal director for the Texas Civil Rights Project.

The letter comes three days after the Texas secretary of state's office announced it would send local election officials a list of 95,000 registered voters who had provided the Texas Department of Safety some form of documentation, such as a green card or a work visa, that showed they were not citizens when they were obtaining driver's licenses or an ID cards.

“Using such a data set to review the current citizenship status of anyone is inherently flawed because it fails to account for individuals who became naturalized citizens and registered to vote at any point after having obtained their driver license or personal identification card,” the lawyers wrote.

The FDNY's diversity monitor has cost the city $23 million in 7 years

By Susan Edelman

January 26, 2019 | 11:35pm | Updated

Shutterstock

Mark S. Cohen's yearly tab has risen from $1.6 million in 2012 to $4.9 million in 2018, bringing his total so far to $22,923,840.36, records reviewed by The Post show.

It's a steady — and lucrative — gig.

Brooklyn federal judge Nicholas Garaufis appointed Cohen, a former white-collar prosecutor, after a 2007 lawsuit by the Vulcan Society of black firefighters and the US Justice Department charged the FDNY discriminated against minorities. .

Ex-Mayor Mike Bloomberg fought the case for years, but Mayor Bill de Blasio, after taking office in 2014, agreed to settle for a massive $98 million.

Cohen continued to monitor anti-bias reforms under the settlement.

While Bloomberg's top lawyer Michael Cardozo quickly griped that Cohen was charging more than $300,000 in each of his bi-monthly bills as "a great deal of wastefulness," de Blasio's top lawyer, Zachary Carter, never raised a stink — until now.

After getting Cohen's last two bills totaling a $1.9 million for four months — his biggest tabs ever — the city Law Department sent a Jan. 16 letter to Garaufis, asking him to review the "dramatically" higher costs.

Garaufis then asked Cohen for a written explanation. On Thursday, Cohen filed an answer, citing various efforts to evaluate and improve the FDNY's recruitment of black and Hispanic firefighters.

On Friday, Garaufis ordered the city to pay up. And the city lawyers promptly backed down, even praising Cohen's service.

"In cooperation with the monitor, the fire department has made substantial progress in implementing court-ordered reforms that have led to the recruitment and retention of a historically diverse workforce," said a Law Department spokesman.

Of nearly 8,600 FDNY firefighters, 25 percent are now minorities, including 87 women, spokesman Jim Long said.

Cohen charges up to $650 an hour for his Manhattan firm's work.

In addition to the total $22.9 million in his firm's fees and expenses, Cohen has billed for consultants to help on equal employment matters, firefighter exam development, and medical testing, officials said.

The consultants have added at least $1.5 million in costs since 2012.

Cohen also bills for "claims administrators" to handle phone calls and emails from claimants in the lawsuit — even though it has long settled.

"At this point, they continue to respond to calls and emails from claimants though the volume is far lower," the city spokesman said.

Garaufis appointed Cohen to serve for a decade, so the bimonthly billing can continue another three years.

In his letter last week, Cohen vowed to fulfill his role "as efficiently as possible." He also said he "expects to reduce, rather than increase" the time spent on areas that boosted the latest billing.

If you went back to 1950s America and told a random guy on the street that one day a cocky 'Arab-American' named Mousa Kraish would openly demonize white Americans, the guy on the street would assume that America had lost a major war and been invaded. MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis wants to tie funding of neighborhood groups to their diversity

By MIGUEL OTÁROLA, STAR TRIBUNE
January 27, 2019 - 8:30 PM

Neighborhood associations in Minneapolis could lose their funding if their leadership doesn't include enough people of color and renters under changes proposed by the city.

The 70 city-funded neighborhood associations have been a key part of Minneapolis' civic life for decades, maintaining paid staffs, providing housing assistance, organizing local cleanups and art events, running drug-prevention campaigns and more. For years, the city has looked to diversify their boards, which have been disproportionately made up of white homeowners.

The future of the groups is now the focus of an initiative called Neighborhoods 2020, which would bring them more firmly under City Hall control. The tax district that funneled millions of dollars to the associations is set to expire at the end of this year — with $4.1 million earmarked for 2019 and more for 2020 — and the city says the groups need to change if they want continued city funding.

“We really want ... to make sure that any resident of Minneapolis is able to walk into a neighborhood organization and be able to participate,” David Rubedor, the director of the city’s Neighborhoods and Community Relations department, said last week. “We want our neighborhood organizations ... to really reflect the diversity of their community. Not only in the programming and the activities that they do, but also in their leadership.”

While neighborhood boards are reaching age, income and gender benchmarks, the number of people of color and renters who participate still lags, according to city data. The city hit only 33 percent of its “owner vs. renter” and 50 percent of its “people of color” goals in 2018, a small increase from five years ago.

The city’s population, meanwhile, has become more diverse since most neighborhoods began to receive city funding in the early 1990s. More than half of all housing is renter-occupied, and white residents now make up about 60 percent of the city as opposed to about 78 percent in 1990.

Province announces community grants aimed at combatting racism

BY POSTMEDIA NEWS

ORIGINALLY PUBLISHED: JAN 26, 2019

The Alberta government has announced 33 recipients of community grants aimed at fighting racial discrimination.

Organizations that will receive the funding include the Institute for the Advancement of Aboriginal Women and the non-profit group Soccer Without Boundaries, which delivers multicultural outreach programs.

Soccer Without Boundaries executive director Jean Claude Munyemamu said the program connects new Canadians to the community “through the universal language of sport.”

“With people from over 30 countries, including refugee, immigrant and Indigenous kids, this grant will help minority families to feel that they belong,” the Calgarian said in a news release.

Marggo Pariseau, vice-president of the Institute for the Advancement of Aboriginal Women, said the organization has been working with Indigenous people for more than two decades to address discrimination.

More than $600,000 in provincial grants is being distributed through a community anti-racism funding stream and through an Indigenous anti-racism funding stream.

The provincial government said eligible organizations can apply for matching grants of as much as $25,000 for a range of projects, including initiatives focused on training and education, development of informational resources, and support services.

The anti-racism community grant program received $2 million in funding in the 2018-19 Alberta budget. The application deadline for the next round of grants is March 1.

The establishment of the community anti-racism grants program was the result of consultations with Albertans who experience racism.

Education Minister David Eggen said during those consultations, he heard “loud and clear that the most effective work happens at the community level.”

The province has said it will also establish an anti-racism advisory council.

Europe 'coming apart
before our eyes', say 30
top intellectuals

“Abandoned from across the Channel and from across the Atlantic by the two great allies who in the previous century saved it twice from suicide; vulnerable to the increasingly overt manipulations of the master of the Kremlin, Europe as an idea, as will and representation, is coming apart before our eyes,” the text reads.

The 800-word paeon was drafted by the French philosopher Bernard-Henri Lévy. Signatories included the novelists Ian McEwan and Salman Rushdie, the historian Simon Schama and the Nobel prize laureates Svetlana Alexievitch, Herta Müller, Orhan Pamuk and Elfriede Jelinek.

Amazon face-detection technology shows gender and racial bias, researchers say

UPDATED ON: JANUARY 25, 2019 / 8:30 PM / AP

Facial-detection technology that Amazon is marketing to law enforcement often misidentifies women, particularly those with darker skin, according to researchers from MIT and the University of Toronto. Privacy and civil rights advocates have called on Amazon to stop marketing its Rekognition service because of worries about discrimination against minorities.

@DasCarlson In the meantime, whites should and will (and already do) segregate into ethno towns and neighborhoods. The PNW plan basically just acknowledges and is proof of this natural separation

@DasCarlson I think segregation and secession is in America's future, but I'm not sure how far out. This bloated decaying empire might last 10 more years or 100. Once it does finally break apart, the PACNW is the most logical location for the white ethnostate

14 Dec18 @TheEuropeanMan1 The European Man

5. Worse still, they attack & ostracize the people who call out the inverters. From a tactical standpoint, these shame-motivated 'traditionalists' are the inverters greatest assets. For they act as gatekeepers limiting the truth, while do nothing to reverse the inversion

14 Dec18 @TheEuropeanMan1 The European Man

4. Therein lies the rub. Most of the people who bemoan the inversion have still been neutered & emasculated by it. Afraid of being guilted & shamed if they were to name the people behind the inversion, they do not even try to identify them.

14 Dec18 @TheEuropeanMan1 The European Man

3. The ancient mores upon which society was built have been turned on their head & twisted. This was not by accident or mere coincidence. The inversion was intentional, meticulous, calculated. Recognizing the inversion is easy, identifying the people behind it, not so much

14 Dec18 @TheEuropeanMan1 The European Man

2. However, in the brave new world in which we reside, guilt & shame have been weaponized against traditionalism & normal human behavior (e.g., shame for being a straight white, shame for having too many children, shame for being pure, shame for being a stay at home mother, etc.)

14 Dec18 @TheEuropeanMan1 The European Man

1. Shame & guilt are healthy human emotions. For ions they have been used to uphold traditionalism, normalize natural behavior, & discourage degeneracy (e.g., shame for having a child out of wedlock, shame for not providing for your family, shame for being promiscuous, etc.)
